RULES THE FINANCIAL WORLD.

THE BANK OF ENGLAND, LONDON.

The grim granite structure that houses the Bank of England eloquently bespeaks the financial power which that institution exercises throughout the civilized world. Its edicts carry greater influence than those of Rome, and its power is farther reaching than that of the throne itself. By arbitrary fixing the rate of discount it can stem the ebbs and flows of money and cause it again to flow into its coffers. On its presentation of the financial needs of the kingdom it can dictate legislation of almost any kind. It has been well said that the Bank of England is the most powerful financial institution in the world. In the very heart of London stands this low-browed, massive structure, streaked with soot and without even a window in its outer walls. This absence of windows is supposed to give greater security to its valuable contents, the light within being received from interior courts and skylights. The structure looks therefore like a gigantic strong-box, covering four acres of territory. Below the surface of the ground there are more rooms in this structure than on the ground floor. Architecturally it has nothing to attract, but it stands as a representative of a wealthy and influential empire.

WHAT IS GOOD?

"What is the real good?" I asked in musing mood. Order, said the law clerk; Knowledge, said the school; Truth, said the wise man; Pleasure, said the fool; Love, said the maiden; Beauty, said the page; Freedom, said the dreamer. Home, said the sage; Fame, said the soldier; Equity, said the seer. Spake my heart full sadly, "The answer is not here." Then within my bosom softly this I heard: "Each heart holds the secret; Kindness is the word." —John Boyle O'Reilly.

The Fateful Miss Douglas

Mrs. Ransom surveyed her tall brother meditatively, while he returned the scrutiny with smiling cheerfulness. John MacPherson was enjoying to the utmost the little visit to his sister, whom he had not seen since her marriage a couple of years previous, so he did not in the least understand why she should sigh and remark seriously: "It's too bad; yes, it is!"

"What?" he asked, lazily. "Why, that you got here just the day after Isabel Douglas left town," responded pretty little Mrs. Ransom. "She's the dearest girl! She's—"

"Lives in Kentucky, beautiful as a dream, glorious brown eyes, most charming disposition on earth, is—"

"Where'd you meet her?" broke in Mrs. Ransom, breathlessly. "I never had the pleasure," laughed her brother. "Only I had to sit one whole evening during my visit in Toledo and hear my hostess recount the charms of this most evasive Isabel. She had left there just the week before my arrival. I seem to cast a blighting shadow over her enjoyment; at any rate, she runs at my approach."

But if he had not seen her the fame of Miss Isabel Douglas was destined to haunt his ears. During his visit at his sister's he heard Miss Douglas' name so frequently on the lips of visitors that he grew half irritated. It was impossible that any girl could be such a paragon—and if she was he had no desire to know her.

When he reached Chicago on his homeward way he stopped to transact some business. Phillips, his lawyer, was most cordial in pressing his New York client to come out to his house and MacPherson was half induced to accept. His frame of mind experienced an instantaneous change, however, when Phillips added:

"We've a visitor coming to-morrow you'd like to meet, I know—Miss Isabel Douglas of Kentucky. She—"

"Sorry," said Mr. MacPherson, decidedly, "but I can't wait over a day on any account, my dear man." Even in New York he was not left in peace. One of the newspapers printed a page of pictures and gossip about beautiful women and, idly glancing it over, the name of Douglas caught his eye. He groaned as he looked closer—yes, the first name was Isabel. Then he searched for the picture of her and stared at it half indignantly. It was a very lovely face, more than that, it was high-bred and thoughtful, as well as perfect in line and form.

THE GIRL HERSELF BROKE THE ICE.

had braced himself for resistance. But to his bewilderment, like a dash of cool water in his face, he realized there was absolutely nothing to resist.

Miss Douglas, far lovelier than her picture, had given him one rare, cordial smile which revealed the secret of her power; for it was a smile speaking a sympathetic interest in the individual addressed, and then had not paid very much more attention to him, being interested in the conversation of a returned arctic explorer.

MacPherson studied her at his leisure and as the moments passed found himself grasping wildly at all his ingrained prejudices against her. He had wits enough to reflect in a panic-stricken way that if the mere sight of her was so charming, acquaintance with her might work marvelous changes in a man's feelings. When they passed out to the dining room MacPherson found himself halting for something to say, a new exercise for him.

The girl herself broke the ice by remarking that she thought she knew his sister—was not Nan Ransom out West that relative? She had mentioned her brother so often. "She certainly got in her special brand of hypnotic work on me, all right," he told his reflection grimly that night as he took off his cravat before the mirror. "But, then, she's an exception!"

John MacPherson was a man who went out after what he wanted when he got his mind made up. He never really made up his mind about Isabel Douglas, however—that is, deliberately. He did not have time. It was a fatal attack from the very first when she had said "yes." Mrs. Ransom laughed and cried alternately when she got the laconic message. It said:

"I have at last met Isabel. You can buy your gown to wear to the wedding." —Philadelphia Bulletin.

SPENDS MILLIONS ON HORSES

Germany Leads World in Importation—Chiefly Draught Horses.

From some statistics published recently by M. Ruau, the German minister of agriculture, the land of the kaiser leads the world in the matter of importing horses. In case of war the Germans are bound that they will be in possession of a liberal supply of horses. For the last three years there has been a slight decrease, the cause being that home breeders are doing well. In 1909 Germany imported 119,000 horses at a cost of $20,000,000. Most of the imports were made for draught purposes; light draught horses numbered 43,000 and were of the value of $4,500,000. The heavy draught horses numbered 48,500 and were of the value of $10,000,000. Supplies of the former class were drawn principally from Russia, which sent 30,225 head; then came the Netherlands, with 9,024, Austria and Hungary accounted for 2,825, Denmark for 467, and the rest were drawn from France and Belgium. The heaviest of the draught horses were mainly supplied from Belgium, 20,000 being imported at an average price of $210. Denmark delivered 16,309, France 5,847, Austria and Hungary 3,369, Russia 2,051, the Netherlands 64 and England only 125. In 1908 Germany imported 267 half-bred sires at an average cost of $1,020, most of them being from Belgium. Saddle horses are put down as numbering 6,542, of which Austria supplied 2,948 against 2,227 from England. These latter figures include the thoroughbreds. The favorite market for cheap horses for Germany has been Russia, which country supplied 16,888 at an average cost of $75.

Musical in the Air.

"Which would you prefer your wife to be, play the violin or piano?" "Violin. It would be easier to chuck out of the window." —Bon Vivant.

ABOUT EARTH'S ENVELOPE

Three Layers of Air—Cold and Gales of High Altitudes.

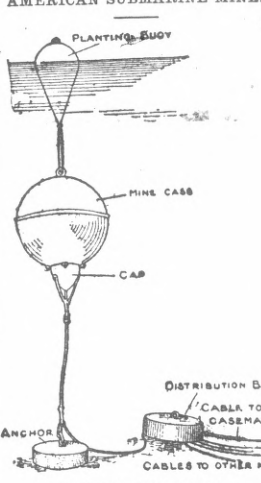

The new science of the air is the result of many hundred kite and sounding balloon flights made by day and by night in fair weather and foul, over land and sea, at all seasons of the year and from the equator to the arctic circle, an exchange says. Most people know that the warm air surrounding the earth is only a thin belt, but we do not most of us know that at ten miles above the earth it would not only be bitterly cold, but the sun would appear quite different.

The air is stratified in three more or less distinct layers. In the lowest we live. It extends about two miles and is a region of turmoil, whimsical winds, cyclones and anticyclones. At two miles the freezing point is reached and then there is a second stratum extending upward for about another six miles. Here the air grows steadily colder and drier, the lowest temperature recorded being 167 degrees below freezing point. Here the air moves in great planetary swirls produced by the spinning of the earth on its axis, so that the wind always blows in the same easterly direction.

The greater the height the more furious is the blast of this relentless gale. After this layer comes the third or isothermal stratum, discovered almost simultaneously by M. de Bort and Dr. Assmann. This is called the permanent inversion stratum, because the temperature increases with the height reached. But the temperatures so far recorded in the second stratum are not high, being far below zero Fahrenheit, generally somewhere from 122 degrees to 140 degrees below it.

Here the air no longer swirls in a planetary circle. The wind may blow in a direction contrary to that in the second layer. And the air invariably is excessively dry. Where this third stratum ends no one knows. But it must be at more than eighteen miles above the earth, for sounding balloons have reached this height and have not found the end of the permanent inversion layer of air. When the influence of the upper regions of air upon the lower is fully understood it may be possible to foretell the weather not merely for a day, but for a week.

AMERICAN SUBMARINE MINE.

The type of submarine mine planted by the United States Coast Artillery Corps for blowing up the vessels of the enemy in times of war is shown in this drawing. At the present time ships known as mine planters, with detachments of troops on board, are busy planting such mines for practice purposes. The drawing gives an excellent idea of the mechanism of such a mine and its manner of discharge by electric current from the shore. The buoy rising above the surface of the water is used to mark the mines.—Popular Mechanics.

Lawyer's Instinct.

A barrister noted for absence of mind was once witnessing a representation of "Macbeth," and on the witches replying to the Thane's inquiry that they were "doing a deed without a name," catching the sound of the words, he started up, exclaiming, to the astonishment of the audience:

"A deed without a name? Why, it's void; it's not worth sixpence." —Tit-Bits.

Not Likely to Become General.

Of course it was the daughter of an American millionaire who appeared at London's famous roller skating rink wearing a pair of heavily jeweled skates! We should all be terribly disappointed if any other girl had thought of such a thing first! The idea is not likely to be widely imitated, even among the ultra rich, which is also a comfort.

Had Already Happened.

Fortune Teller.—I can read that there is to be a wreck in your home, and it will be caused by a blonde woman.

Patron.—Oh, that has already occurred. Our new Swedish maid let the dumb waiter fall and broke all the dishes.

One Instance.

Father.—You never heard of a man getting into trouble by following a good example?

Son.—Yes, sir; I have—the counter-felter.—Tit-Bits.

When he is feeling tough, anyway, and the assessor raises his tax valuation, a man can be about the most disagreeable thing on earth.

With most of your friends you treasure up things they do or say that offend you.

THE GUBERNATORIAL WHIRLPOOL

San Francisco.—Whatever may be said to the contrary, the State political campaign is in full swing. Particularly in the large cities and in congested centers of population lively interest has been excited in the fortunes of the various leading candidates and enthusiasm is rapidly spreading to the rural communities of the State.

In the Democratic fold the situation is interesting. The Los Angeles conference promises to unfold several bitter controversies which are now being waged under cover. From appearances, Bell has the best of it, but he is not sleeping any the sounder from the fact that Gavin McNab is for Senator E. O. Miller for the Democratic nomination for Governor. It is generally understood that McNab patched a peace with Bell and induced him to come to San Francisco for the sole purpose of watching the Napa stateman bruise his face on the laborer barbed wire fence.

Bell is bruised enough, and the labor leaders are looking to take what remains of his political scalp. McNab is chucking, but Bell still has the Democratic State organization. He expects Tim Spillacy to be his running mate in the campaign, and the expectation is gladdening the Democratic heart, for Spillacy is now rich and he always was liberal in the old days.

Tom Geary and Senator Sanford are still flirting on the outer edge of the ring, but their fortunes have waned since ex-Lieutenant-Governor Jeter of Santa Cruz has been suggested with some show of support for the gubernatorial nomination. Jeter was a good officer. He has a wide experience in public affairs and also has a banking record. The Los Angeles conference ought to be interesting.

On the Republican side Secretary of State Curry has forced his opponents into the open and is compelling them, with the primary election almost five months away, to show their hands.

The standard bearers of the two machines within the Republican party, the railroad and the Lincoln-Roosevelt League, were slumbering in the opinion that Curry's following is simply personal. Both Johnson and Anderson have awakened with a start to discover that Curry has behind him a formidable organization of which personal popularity is simply one of many elements.

The Secretary of State has enjoyed a continuity of public service greater than that of any other officer in California. He has been identified with measures of the highest importance to the welfare of California. He has inspired reforms which have been of primary advantage to many classes of people. It is this record which both Johnson and Anderson are contending against in their campaign. It is upon this record that Curry's organization is based. This fact may be accepted as the most significant development of the State campaign during the last week, and it is perhaps doubly significant that the managers of Johnson and Anderson are entirely frank in admitting it.

While the Democrats are soon to occupy the center of the political stage with their Los Angeles conference, they will not by any means monopolize political attention. It is inevitable that the affairs of the Republican party, the dominant party of the State, must attract a major part of interest. The various moves which are being made in this city, therefore, to set the political board for the campaign are being watched with catlike vigilance by the politicians.

They are deeply concerned, for example, to explain the official announcement that Leon Denberry, Johnny Lynch, George Adams and Russ Lukens will be the State managers of Anderson's campaign. From the point of view of the professional politicians, no more unfortunate selection could have been made. Denberry's record in the tenderloin of San Francisco will certainly not appeal favorably to the State at large. Even when Mayor McCarthy employed him to exploit the metropolitan red-light district the choice was viewed by McCarthy's friends with misgiving.

Johnny Lynch is so completely identified with machine politics that his attachment to the Anderson cause leaves nothing to be suspected. As a bell ringer, Lynch has been long in service, and the friends of Anderson are shaking their heads dubiously. Adams has been in every camp that held forth promise of a job, and Lukens has been identified with the opposition in Alameda County.

Johnson has divided his campaign energies into two departments. He has entrusted his publicity to what was left of the press bureau of the graft prosecution when that movement collapsed in San Francisco. This bureau is flooding the State with pamphlets and press notices which the interior editors are asked to publish at their own expense for the good of the cause. The other feature of the Johnson canvass is based upon the theory of Johnson's personal magnetism and his understanding of political conditions.

His lieutenants have expressed a fear that he has been unwise in making too palpable an appeal to class prejudices and locality interests. When he emphatically told Los Angeles that it had been subjected to a gross outrage in the recent matter of assessment he may have helped himself in Los Angeles, but his advisers were quick to see that he did himself material harm in northern and central California. He did not improve the situation by his sweeping condemnation of San Francisco as a sink of corruption. These little incidents of campaign oratory are sometimes costly. Johnson has been advised that he might with some wisdom accept Curry's position in reference to the State at large.

The Secretary of State has announced unequivocally that he is neither a factional nor a sectional candidate. His long experience in dealing with the necessities of California as a whole has given him this point of view. The friends of Johnson say this is good politics; the friends of Curry declare that it is the kind of politics which is good for the predominating army of Californians who are not politicians.

In the northern and central parts of California Stanton does not yet figure as a contender. Some of the shrewd observers insist that he is being propped in the fight by the railroad machine to take votes from Johnson. Others express the opinion that the same manipulators are using him to injure Curry. Either view is without authority, and Stanton has as yet employed no lieutenants here to indicate the direction of his political mind. The only person who is handling a Stanton petition is Billy Bell, a south-side politician of the rough-and-tumble sort. Bell wins a political victory where he catches the other fellow on the point of the jaw. It is of record that the other fellow generally beats Bell to the punch.

As a summary of the Republican situation at the present time it may be announced with authority that Anderson is not yet in the field with any semblance of organization. He is placing reliance upon an assertion that when Johnny Lynch rings the bell the faithful will get aboard. Johnson has behind him many of the Lincoln-Roosevelt League, but not by any means a united rank and file. It is conceded that he recently turned a good trick in mending his political fences, as far as Rudolph Spreckels is concerned. Johnson and Spreckels quarreled violently over the amount of fee Johnson was to receive for his part in the graft prosecution. The lawyer's price was a stiff one, and Spreckels refused to pay. Johnson threatened to sue for his money, and a new scandal was threatened. An agreement, however, has been reached and Johnson has been paid a sum satisfactory both to him and to Spreckels.

In the Curry campaign organization is well on the way to completion. In several of the counties of the State the regular county committee is handling the Curry petitions. In every county the Secretary of State has leaders of the organization and of the Lincoln-Roosevelt League actively in his canvass. Petitions are in circulation in all counties and in many localities, astounding as it may appear, an actual majority of the Republican vote will be pledged on the Curry petitions. It is this fact, no longer a secret, which is causing the other candidates grave alarm.

Bread and Cheese.
A couple advanced in years got married lately.

The husband had a room in the house securely locked, the inside of which his wife had never seen, and, being curious of its contents, she begged again and again to see the room.

At last he consented, and, lo and behold, the room was full of whole cheeses!

He explained matters by telling her that for every sweetheart he had in his young days he bought a cheese. His wife began to cry.

"Don't cry, dear," he said. "I've had no sweethearts since I met you."

"It's not that," she replied, still sobbing. "I only wish I had been as thoughtful as you and bought a loaf of bread for every man that kissed me. We could have had bread and cheese enough to last us all our days."

Stomach Ills May Seem Trifles

At the start, but that is when you want to take the matter in hand. Neglect can only result the one way—sickness. The stomach is largely responsible for one's health and strength and as such it needs to be kept in a normal condition. If it becomes weak, the food remains undigested, ferments, and causes untold suffering. Thus you lose the strength-giving properties of your food and you become weak and run down. This is very noticeable at the beginning of Spring when the system is overloaded with Winter impurities, the bowels clogged and the blood thick. No wonder you have the "Spring Fever." Commence taking Hostetter's Stomach Bitters this very day and cleanse the entire system. Then your Stomach Ills will also vanish. It is for Sick Headaches, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Spring Fever, General Debility and Malaria.

She flattered herself she was looking uncommonly handsome. The gentle finger of a pale-faced man, sitting behind her, tapped her on the shoulder.

"Please, miss," murmured that unfortunate individual, "do you mind removing your—ahem!—your hat?"

"Yes, I do!" she snapped, and glared her eyes once more upon her idol.

"Look here, miss," persisted the pale gentleman, "I want to look as well as you!"

"Oh, do you?" she retorted, turning round and looking him straight between the eyes. "Then you'd better run home and change your face!"

IN THE BLOOD.

Climbing to the Swiss as Natural a Walking to Others.

Climbing is in the blood of the Swiss, the Savoyard, the Piedmontese. The toddler presses his chubby arms against the rock by the doorsteps and tries to crawl upward. It is his "stunt." Years may pass before he can struggle to the top, but when he does, proud is he of his feat. Here is a country where everything is up and down. You see sheep and goats grazing on slopes where it would seem as if nothing could gain a foothold; but if you reach them you find they are cropping the herbage perhaps on a little shelf of verdure so narrow that a single leap would send them over the precipice. The boy and girl are some sure-footed as soon as they leave of creeping. Climbing is so necessary that it becomes as natural as moving on a level surface.

Thus it is that when an explorer ventures into the world of cloud land he seldom attempts climbing without the company of a veteran. It may be in faraway Alaska or on the other side of the earth amid the Himalayas, the Alpine guide is with him no matter who else is in the party. When the Duke of the Abruzzi, when he told slowly up the slopes and sides of St. Elias, went Giuseppe Pettigax, the Savoyard, who had been one of the teachers of the royal adventurer amid the mountains of his home country. When near the goal, Pettigax was in the lead, but dropped behind to give the duke the honor of being the first to reach the top of this great pile of northwest America. Later, when he tried to solve the mystery of the Mountains of the Moon, by his side were Pettigax of Alaskan fame and Cesar Ollier. By their help he pierced the mists and snows that hid Mount Ruwenzori, and in 1906 stood upon the highest of its group of peaks—the first white man to accomplish this feat.

THE POWER OF ODORS.

Agreeable Scents Said to Exercise a Highly Beneficial Effect.

An idea recently adopted from the Orient is the use of sweet scents as an aid to digestion. Everyone admits nowadays that the influence of odors is exceedingly marked. Some people can remain where flowers are in full bloom or bear the odor of jasmine. Some are given to the odor of heliotrope or tuberose. Some are given the vertigo or a sinking sensation by cantharides, some are nauseated even by roses. Attacks of real illness with long trains of digestive disorders following in their wake may be brought on by odors.

The fact can be explained only as a pathological phenomenon, says Dr. George M. Niles, covering it in this habit, for all feel that it borders on nerves and digestion, the gastro-intestinal tract. As offending scents may set in motion a train of morbid digestive symptoms, so, on the contrary, those that are sweet and agreeable may exercise a highly beneficial effect. The Orientals have developed to a notable degree the faculty of deriving the most enjoyment from inhaling fragrant odors.

The most beautiful creations pictured in the imagination of Mohammedans are those presented in the Koran as symbols of paradise, formed of musk, who exhale from their lovely bodies entrancing perfumes. It is the custom of many eastern peoples to spend after each meal a season of quiet while the air around them is rendered fragrant by a fine mist. Or a bottle of their favorite perfume is constantly inhaled.

Even the poor indulge in this habit, for all feel that it borders on nerves and digestion. Dr. Niles believes that a psychic state favorable to the digestive process may be induced through the olfactory faculty as well as through the other senses.

SUPREMACY IN NEW JERUSALEM.

Germany's Part in the Development of the Ancient City.

The first memorial which strikes the eyes of a traveler when he arrives at Jerusalem, says a French visitor who has recently returned to Paris, is the new church of the Germans on Mount Zion. It is built on land, says the London Globe, given by Abdul Hamid to the German emperor. Its architecture and vast proportions are admired by all who see the building. The church will be served by German Benedictines, and it is to be consecrated next year, it is said, in the presence of Prince Eitel II., representing the kaiser. Afterward the prince will take part in the opening of the sanitarium, also German, which is near by. At the other extremity of the town, near the Damascus gate, German buildings are increasing. The hospice and hostelry are finished. The orphanage, with chapel, is in contemplation. This will be under the charge of the Lazarists of Cologne, whose funds have contributed millions of marks for charitable purposes in the holy land. In short, it is Germany which holds the supremacy in Jerusalem, and that supremacy is not hidden.

The Safe Course.
Mrs. Wilson's husband was often obliged to travel on business, and frequently did not reach home till after midnight. His wife had been in the habit of sleeping peacefully at these times, says a writer in the Spokesman Review, but a number of burglaries in the neighborhood during one of Mr. Wilson's trips had disturbed her calm.

On one night of his return Mr. Wilson was stealing carefully up the front stairs, so that his wife would not be awakened, when he heard her voice, high and strained.

"I don't know whether you are my husband or a burglar," came the excited tones, "but I am going to be on the safe side and shoot, so if you are Henry you'd better get out of the way!"

Teaching Baby to Walk.
Never encourage a baby to try to walk if he seems unwilling to learn. The sockets of the joints are very shallow in tiny children and the bones so feebly connected that they are easily dislocated. Besides, bowed legs are very much easier to avoid than to cure, and standing before the legs are strong enough to bear the weight of the body may result in permanent deformity.

A Common Experience.
"It's a fact," declared Towne, "that my wife is able to dress on comparatively little money." A writer in the Catholic Standard and Times discloses the secret.

"What?" exclaimed his companion. "Oh, come, now, what do you mean by comparatively little?"

"I mean on little compared with what she thinks she ought to have."
